Changing Lives Through Literature is a program for women offenders/probationers. It involves 7 sessions that will meet every other week. The first class starts on September 25, 2001. The classes will take place at Middlesex Community College in Lowell under the direction of Professor Jean Tounstine. Transportation will be provided for all. The participants will be required to attend the classes, complete reading assignments, participate in classroom discussions, and complete any other work assigned by the professor. If you have any questions, please contact Probation Officer Michelle Carter (781-598-6400).